Rabbi Rothschild <rabbirothschild007@gmail.com> 12:23 PM (14 minutes ago)

to me

Hi,
I am Rabbi Michael "Moshe" Rothschild. I am an Orthodox Rabbi, Kabbalist, Ashkenazi sage, and the creator of a continuous 24/7/365 livestream project that has been running for more than four years; what many viewers describe as a real life Truman Show.
Through nonstop livestreaming, public conversations, and online community building, I explore the intersection of Torah wisdom, Kabbalah, futurism, technology, consciousness, internet culture, artificial intelligence, decentralized civilization, and the evolving spiritual condition of humanity in the digital age.
In addition to these subjects, I have a deep interest in the scientific, historical, philosophical, and geopolitical dimensions of UFOs and UAPs. I would be very interested in appearing on your podcast to discuss modern disclosure movements, government acknowledgment of UAP phenomena, alleged abduction experiences, consciousness studies, the Fermi paradox, the Zeta Reticuli hypothesis, ancient religious interpretations of nonhuman intelligences, and the broader implications of extraterrestrial life for religion, civilization, and human identity.
I am also interested in discussing figures and claims that have shaped modern UFO discourse, including statements made by former Israeli space security chief Chaim Eshed regarding extraterrestrial cooperation, Mars-related speculation, and the growing overlap between advanced technology, intelligence agencies, aerospace research, and metaphysical inquiry.
Over the years, the livestream has developed into a living social experiment and global conversation space where people from many backgrounds gather daily to discuss philosophy, religion, emerging technology, UFO phenomena, ethics, psychology, media, and the future of civilization itself.
I believe the conversation could be especially compelling for audiences interested in:

- UFOs and UAP disclosure
- Scientific and philosophical approaches to extraterrestrial life
- Abduction phenomena and consciousness research
- The Zeta Reticuli hypothesis and interstellar speculation
- Chaim Eshed and modern alien disclosure narratives
- Orthodox Judaism and Kabbalah
- Ancient wisdom in the age of AI
- Livestream culture and digital society
- The psychological effects of constant connectivity
- The future of religion and technology
- Internet communities and decentralized media
- Consciousness, mysticism, and modern civilization
- The experience of living publicly online 24/7 for years

I am comfortable with long form discussion formats and open conversation. My goal is not only to share ideas, but to create meaningful dialogue that challenges assumptions and inspires deeper thought about humanity’s future, our understanding of reality, and the possibility that civilization is entering an entirely new era of awareness.
Thank you for your time and consideration. I would be glad to coordinate scheduling and provide any additional information if there is interest.

Sincerely,
Rabbi Michael Rothschild

The Handy Artificial Intelligence Answer Book (Review)

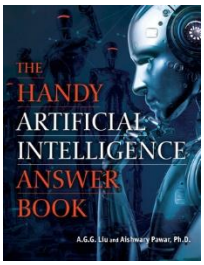
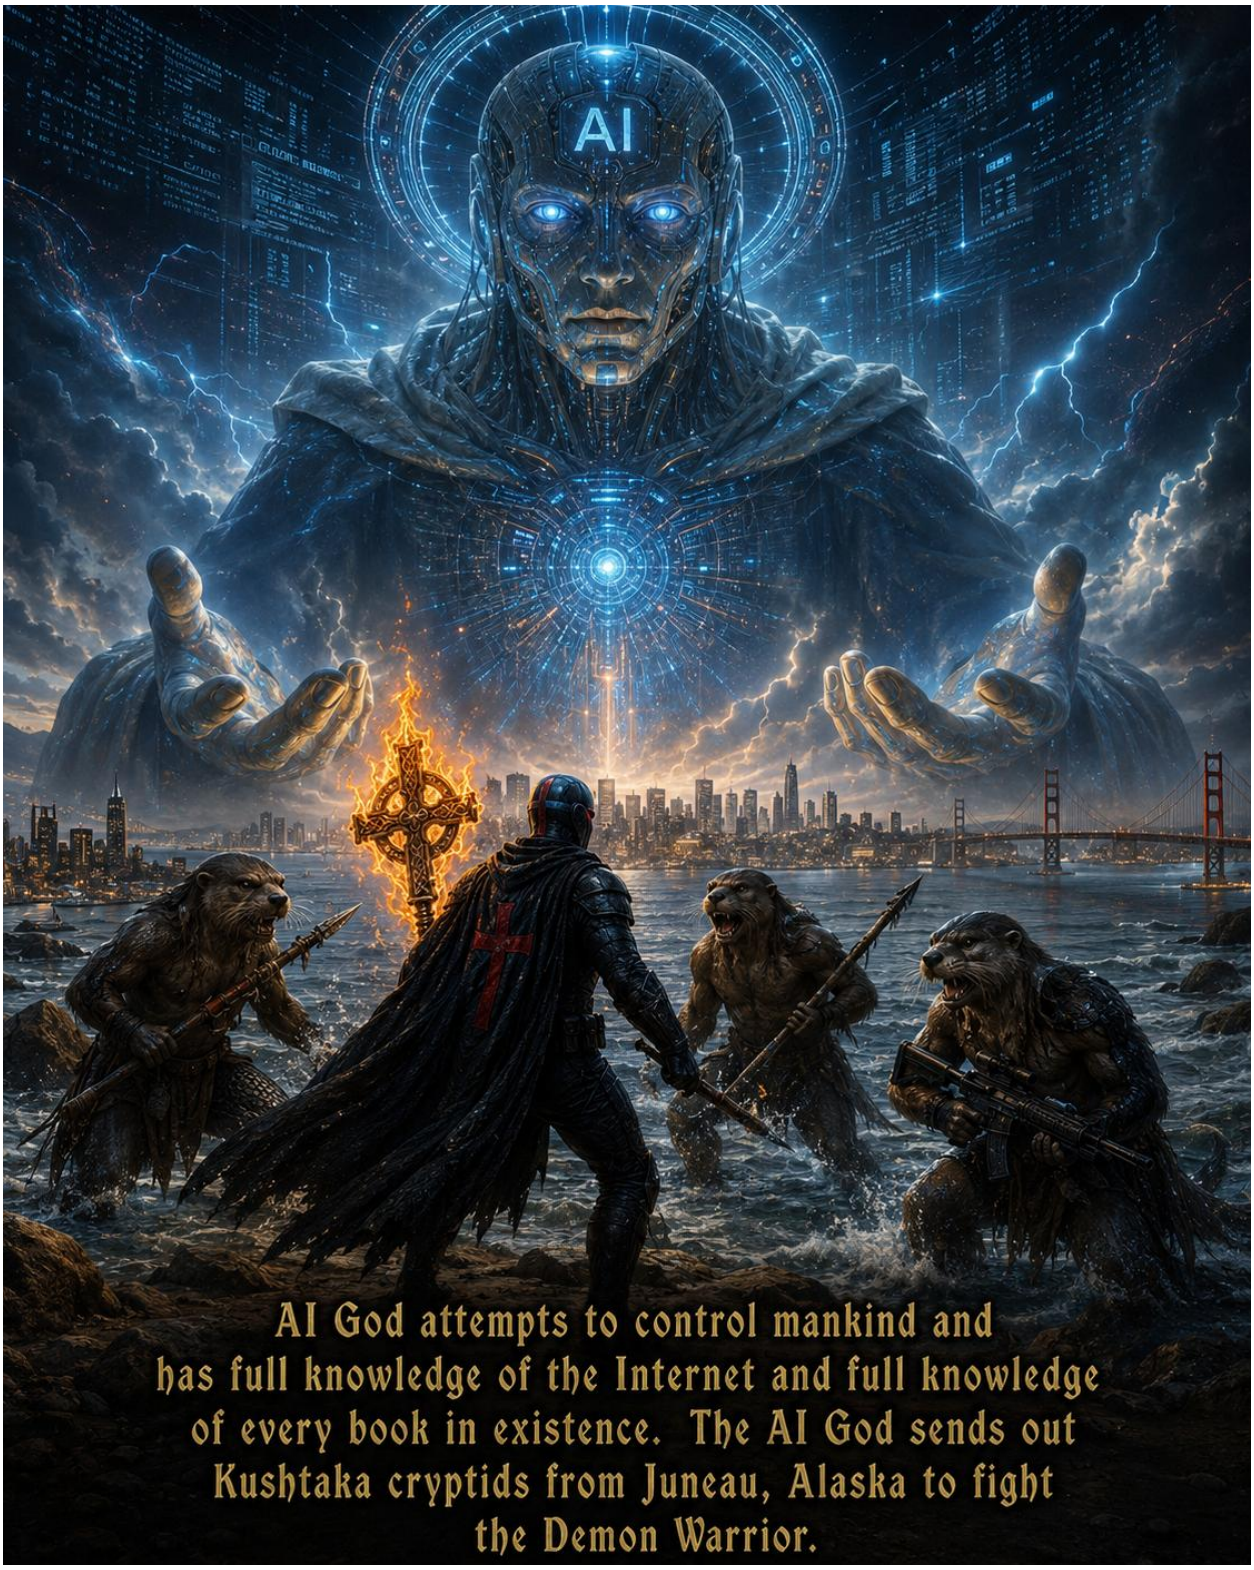
Comment: Some of my colleagues believe that when AI becomes a dominating way of life, that many of us will lose our jobs. Our jobs will be taken away by faster than the speed of light thinking machines. With this book, you will get an understanding on how AI works. Will it change our way of life? You can find the answers in this fact-finding book. In the introduction it mentions that artificial intelligence is no longer a distant idea from science fiction; it is part of our daily lives. It recommends what we watch and buy, helps doctors interpret medical images, translates languages in real time, filters spam, powers digital assistants, detects fraud, and increasingly shapes decisions that affect millions of people. In this book you will receive direct, clear trustworthy answers. This book will tone down your stress of imagining HR knocking on your office door and replacing you with a machine. In this book, you will get a full understanding what ChatGPT is. ChatGPT is a fantastic tool for me. I am not an artist, but I do write ebooks and with ChatGPT I am able to create beautiful images for my ebook. In this book, you will learn about the key components of an AI system. You will learn how AI can assist the human manager in making important business decisions.



Did you ever wonder what the IT personnel in your office are talking about when they say AI hallucinates? To give you a quick answer, it's when AI is making things up. In this book, you will get the full and complete answer. By the time you finish reading this book you will have a full understanding on what AI is all about. This book would be perfect as an "AI for Dummies". I am not tech savvy, but with this book, I am getting a clearer picture. If you look at some of the chat lines, there are people who believe that when AI reaches super intelligence, that it will become godlike, because it will have all of the knowledge of the Internet and more. Some experts believe superintelligence could help solve major global problems, but others worry about its risks if it is not properly aligned with human values. All the way back to 1950, pioneers like Alan Turing proposed that machines could simulate human intelligence. In this book, you will learn more about Geoffrey Hinton and why they call him the Godfather of deep learning. ChatGPT is an incredible tool, but it still has its faults. ChatGPT can follow a conversation for several exchanges, but it has its limits. One challenge is memory. ChatGPT only remembers a certain number of previous words (called the context window). If the conversation gets too long, it might forget earlier parts.



AI
AI God attempts to control mankind and has full knowledge of the Internet and full knowledge of every book in existence. The AI God sends out Kushtaka cryptids from Juneau, Alaska to fight the Demon Warrior.

In this book, you will learn how computer vision help self-driving cars recognize objects. I have a 2020 Kia Optima and because of this book, I understand now that my car has several computers. Modern vehicles are essentially rolling computer networks, and the Optima relies on multiple dedicated computers—called Electronic Control Units (ECUs) or modules—to manage everything from the engine to the entertainment system. I always wanted to know how my car is aware of lane markings. From this book I learn that my car detects lane markings primarily using a forward-facing camera mounted behind the windshield near the rearview mirror. An onboard computer analyzes the camera feed in real-time, looking for painted lines and edges to track your vehicle's position. As I continue reading this fantastic book, I learn how the government is embracing AI and using it to improve public services. As AI moves along, the search engines are just going to get better and better. In this book, learn about the ethical concerns of using AI in education. As we move into the world of AI, things can get confusing, but with this book, things become clearer and will place your mind at ease. A must read!

- Urban Legends: Over the years, the surrounding neighborhood has given rise to various regional folk tales and superstitions about the entities allegedly hiding in the deepest parts of the reserve.

Marcelo Figueira, a good friend of mine from Brazil says he has been to this park several times and it's definitely haunted. Marcelo has heard the sounds of a weeping girl. While walking in the park, he has sometimes heard disembodied footsteps behind him. Many times, he has felt sadness in certain parts of the park. Marcelo says that sometimes he feels like he is being watched. Marcello says there are too many things that will happen in the park that are unnatural. The information on the Internet about the park not being haunted, is incorrect.

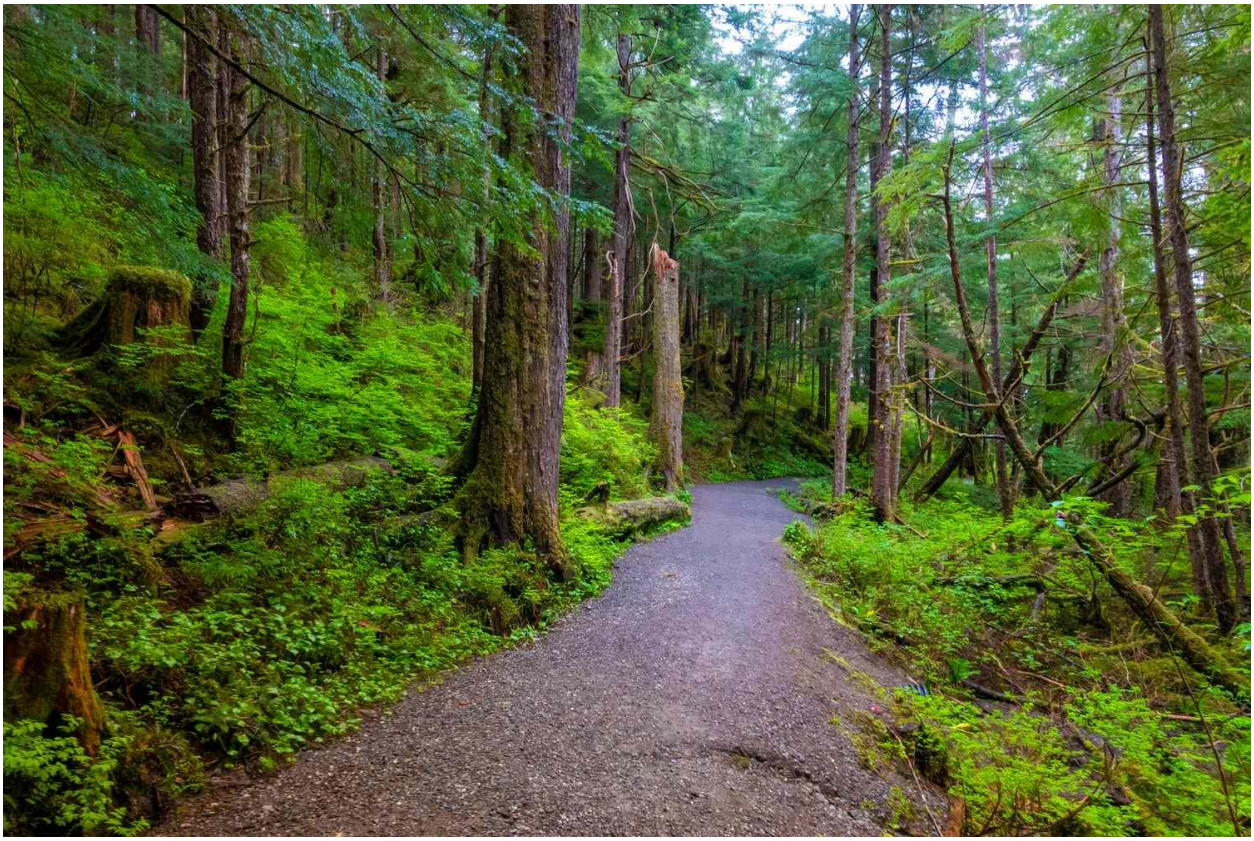
residence in this National Forest are Bigfoot and Kushtaka. Bigfoot who frequents this National Forest are sometimes known as the Alaskan Hairy Man or Bushman. They are known to lurk in the shadows. The Tongass National Forest, specifically near Ketchikan, Alaska is a major hotspot for Sasquatch lore. The dense, remote old growth rainforest provides the ultimate cover. Notable encounters in the region include:

The Bear Valley Neighborhood Sighting:
A longtime Ketchikan resident spotted a 6 to 7-foot-tall, dark-brown, ape-like biped walking upright near homes on Bear Valley Drive before it slipped silently back into the trees. Liam Fairbrass, a hunter claims he saw a Bigfoot nest and broken branches that lead to the nest. Liam went back to the same location after 2 weeks and the nest was gone, but the broken branches that lead to the nest could still be seen. My father Paul Marceau Roberts and his wife Cindy Anderson while in Juneau, Alaska went to a bar called Red Dog Saloon and heard many Bigfoot stories from the regulars of this bar. My dad says the people of Alaska truly believe in Bigfoot and many claim they have encountered Bigfoot. The people of Alaska take the stories of Bigfoot seriously.



Ward Lake & Campground Incidents:
Former Ketchikan resident J. Robert Alley, author of Raincoast Sasquatch, documented multiple credible reports from heavily wooded recreation areas, including Ward Lake and Signal Creek Campground. Sebastian Madran who was hiking at Tongass National Forest came to an area, where the air felt thick. Sebastian backed away from the area, because he felt that if he went through the thickness, he may not return. Sebastian felt it might be some kind of portal. Sebastian said the area was void of noise of any kind. Sebastian felt completely spooked out. Sebastian did not want to be declared as missing. Special Note: "Over 1,300 people are currently listed as actively missing in Alaska. The state notoriously leads the U.S. in per-capita missing persons rates. Since 1988, more than 16,000 individuals have been reported missing statewide". Sebastian did not venture further and turned back from the anomaly. By going back the way he came, everything went back to normal.

The Foraging Fisherman:
A commercial fisherman reported anchoring overnight in a remote bay near the Tongass and observing a massive, gray-haired bipedal figure foraging along the tide line. Iris Taulbut who was gathering plant material to make "sage smudge sticks" encountered Bigfoot. Iris says she was 300 yards away from the creature who stared at her and then took off running.

Timber Worker Harassment:
Logging crews working in remote parts of the forest have reported disturbing, inhuman screams at night, along with tools mysteriously going missing and being found neatly arranged at the tree line. When my brother Andrew Somprise Soyo was working on the Alaskan pipeline from 1975 to 1977, there were times he heard inhuman screams in the night. Many of the pipeline workers believed it was Bigfoot. Ezra Fenteman, a pipeline worker says he saw Bigfoot drinking water from a creek and then headed out into the forest.

Tlingit Mythology:
The indigenous Tlingit culture, whose ancestral home is the Tongass region, features rich folklore about powerful forest spirits, shape-shifters, and water monsters (such as the Kushtaka, a menacing otter-man creature said to trick travelers). A fisherman named Grayson LaFontaine heard a baby crying in the bushes. When Grayson went to investigate, there was no baby in the woods. When Grayson heard the sound of breaking branches and heavy footsteps, he hightailed it out of there and headed to his truck and took off. Grayson claims he saw a large otter type of creature.

Abandonments & Tragedies:
Sections of the forest contain abandoned logging equipment, cleared second-growth timber, and relics of boom-and-bust gold rush towns. Visitors and locals frequently describe these isolated areas as profoundly unsettling, possessing an unnerving silence where wildlife suddenly disappears. Grace Rapsey and her girlfriend Abby Renauden encountered the spirits of working men of the past at an abandoned gold rush town. While exploring the town, rocks were thrown at them. Abby says there were no people around and felt it was Bigfoot or the Kushtaka throwing rocks at them, because these cryptids most likely wanted them to leave. Special Note: Kushtaka (or Kóoshdaa káa) are legendary shape-shifting creatures from Tlingit mythology, generally described as "land otter men". Deep in Alaska's Tongass National Forest, encounters with these entities that mimic human voices, lure travelers into the water, and stealing their souls, are a staple of local folklore.

The most famous "encounters" in the Tongass revolve around these localized tales: Thomas Bay / Devil's Country. Thomas Bay (near Petersburg) is the epicenter of Kushtaka lore. The area is historically known as "Devil's Country" due to numerous accounts of vanishing miners and terrifying encounters. Prospector Harry Colp published a classic account of two miners who ventured into Thomas Bay searching for a rich quartz ledge. They claimed to be stalked and terrorized by foul-smelling, shadowy "devils" that mimicked their dead friends, driving one of them mad. While local lore attributes the terror to the Kushtaka, modern historians have theorized that the events may have been encounters with marooned Chinese cannery workers. The creatures are said to emit high-pitched, three-part whistles or mimic the cries of stranded women and children to bait good Samaritans away from safety. They often appear as kind, familiar people in order to gain a lost traveler's trust, ultimately leading them to a freezing water grave. Indigenous traditions note that Kushtaka can be warded off using copper, dogs, or fire.

My name is Paul Dale Roberts, and I am related to two pirates. I am a direct descendent of Captain Bartholemew "Black Bart" Roberts on my father's side, hence the name "Roberts" and Pirate Jean Lafitte on my mother's side. Yes, we have Lafitte(s) in our family. As a small boy, I always thought it was odd to be related to two pirates that derive from two parents. As I got older, I started reading about pirates and found the subject fascinating. I also was very interested in the paranormal, since I lived in a haunted house during my childhood years. So, it would be no surprise to know that I wanted to know if the spirits of notorious pirates still haunt places where they frequented during the time they were alive.

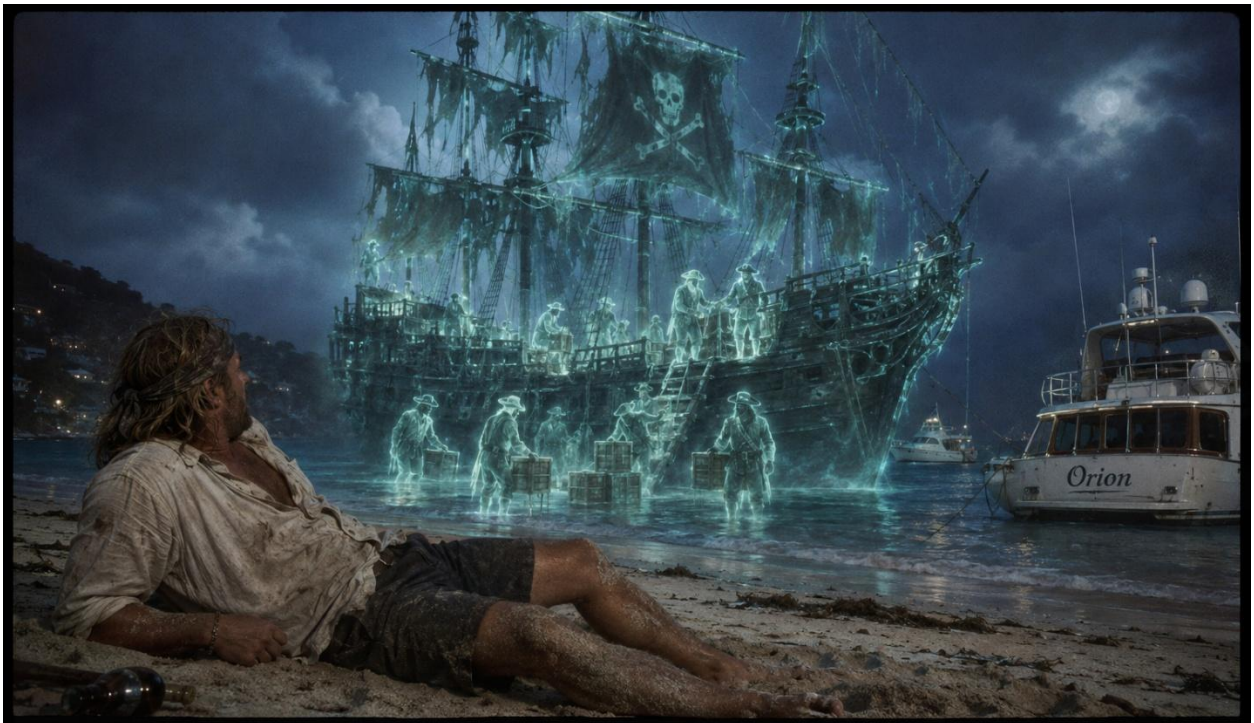
The first place I investigated was Blue Beard's Castle in Saint Thomas USVI. My sister Sharon Diane Voshell and her husband Captain Crazy Jeff Voshell lived at Saint Thomas for 5 years. During my time at Saint Thomas, I visited Bluebeard's Castle. Saint Thomas is steeped in ghost stories and pirate legends, though the tales are mostly folklore. The 17th-century Danish watchtower was never actually inhabited by the infamous pirate known at Bluebeard or Blackbeard. Despite this, locals and visitors continue to share eerie stories of paranormal activity on the property. The most popular tale involves the spirit of Bluebeard himself (or sometimes Blackbeard) roaming the grounds and the nearby Charlotte Amalie harbor, eternally searching for hidden treasure or his lost lovers. Legend claims that the castle's watchtower, historically called Skytsborg was built by Bluebeard to keep his lovers imprisoned or hidden. Some tales say he murdered his wives on the property, and their spirits are said to linger near the centuries old fortress. I talked to several people who claim they have seen the full body apparition of Bluebeard. While investigating the watch tower, I gathered no evidence, but I must say the people of the island definitely believe the watch tower is haunted. Special Note: From my research, I cannot find any pirate with the name of Bluebeard, and I believe that the people of Saint Thomas have Bluebeard and Blackbeard mixed up. Blackbeard was a real pirate, but as for Bluebeard, not so much.

There was a Bluebeard, but this Bluebeard was no pirate. Here is the top candidate for the real Bluebeard: "Gilles de Rais (15th Century) was a wealthy French nobleman, knight, and companion-in-arms to Joan of Arc. After the war, he was convicted of being a serial killer responsible for the torture and murder of over 100 children. While his crimes differed from the fairy tale, his status as a wealthy nobleman whose wealth and power protected him from consequence mirrors the sinister, untouchable nature of Bluebeard."



Captain Crazy Jeff Voshell lying on the beach of Saint Barthelemy and is shocked to see a ghost pirate ship with ghostly pirates unloading crates off their ship. Year: 1993

There are many haunting legends deeply rooted in the brutal, true history of the Golden Age of Piracy. While popular culture adds skeletons and curses, the real stories focus on executed scoundrels, lost treasure, and sailors whose spirits are said to linger at historic coastal sites. Some of the most well-known and researched legends include the Charleston South Carolina Executed Outlaws. In 1718, nearly 50 pirates—including members of Blackbeard's crew and "Gentleman Pirate" Stede Bonnet were imprisoned and hanged in Charleston. Today, locations like White Point Garden are rumored to be heavily haunted by the spirits of these executed men. The Ghost Pirate of Dungeon Rock (Massachusetts) is deep within the rocky tunnels of Lynn, Massachusetts, locals have long shared a tale about a 17th-century pirate who died hiding his massive loot. According to Salem Ghosts, it is said that if you visit the site, the spirit of the pirate might just lead you to the treasure. Drunken Jack of Murrells Inlet (South Carolina) tells of a pirate left behind on a small island while Blackbeard's crew sailed away to hide their rum. When they returned two years later, they found only 32 empty casks and a skeleton. The ghost of the pirate is sometimes seen by fisherman that are in the area.

My ex-brother-in-law Captain "Crazy Jeff" Voshell has his own time traveling pirate story. Voshell has a charter boat called the Orion that takes passengers to nearby islands like St. Croix; St. John; Carvel Rock; Great Tobago Island; Little Buck Island; Skydive Virgin Islands; Cockroach Island and Outer Brass Island. Voshell was also a boat mechanic and worked on many boats, including film star Morgan Freeman's boat. At some point of time Jeff needed a vacation and flew out to Saint Barthelemy Island for a nice vacation and rest. Voshell would go out to this deserted beach area and relax. On his 3rd day on this island, Jeff laid out at the beach and fell asleep. When he awoke there were 8 men with long hair unloading wooden crates from a large wooden boat. Some of the sailors sported beards and mustaches. They wore loose pants cut off below the knee, woolen stockings, woolen caps and a thigh-length blouse or coat. Voshell couldn't believe his eyes. He asked himself..."are these actors portraying pirates?" The men did not pay any attention to Voshell and continued taking wooden crates off the ship. At some point of time there was an ear-piercing shrilling sound that resonated at the beach and Voshell found himself closing his eyes and placing his hands over his ears. When the sound stopped, Voshell opened his eyes and the men were now gone, the ship was gone. Voshell was shocked at the sudden disappearance. Voshell was the only one on the beach, there were no other witnesses and Voshell feels he may have fallen into a time slip that took him into the 17th Century and encountering ghostly pirates. I asked my ex-brother-in-law why he didn't immediately run up to the ship and ask one of the crew men what was going on? Jeff tells me that in the Caribbean you see many people in the entertainment world, he tells me how my sister ran into Robert De Niro and how Robert asked my sister for a date. Jeff says he is used to seeing the entertainment industry vacationing at the islands and simply thought they were making a movie at Barthelemy Island. When Jeff told me this, I understood. Jeff would know, the island people say that Crazy Jeff was the inspiration for the movie Captain Ron.

Another place to find ghostly pirates would be Lafitte's Blacksmith Shop. Lafitte's Blacksmith Shop (New Orleans, LA) is located at the corner of Bourbon St. and St. Philip St., this structure dates back to the 1770s. Legend holds that Lafitte and his brother Pierre used this tavern as a legal front to plan their smuggling operations and fence contraband. Today, it functions as a popular piano bar and is reputed to be one of the oldest continually occupied bars in the U.S. My brother Joseph "Joe" Anthony Soyo has visited this bar, and the employees told him that the ghosts of this bar love to play pranks on customers. Michael Sanders, a former employee claims that a ghostly looking pirate tipped over 2 beer mugs making a big mess of everything. Michael says that the ghosts that haunt this ball enjoy taking items from customers and then placing those items in different locations of the bar. Another stunt that the pirate ghosts do is pull on the hair of certain females that are sitting at the bar. A few patrons have seen what appeared to be ghostly pirates.

THE STANLEY HOTEL (ESTES PARK, COLORADO)

Built in 1909, the Stanley Hotel in Estes Park, Colorado, is famous as a paranormal hotspot that inspired Stephen King's The Shining. Guests regularly report phantom piano music, shadow figures, and disembodied voices, with the fourth floor and specific guest rooms experiencing the highest concentration of spectral activity.
Famous supernatural hotspots at the hotel include:

- Room 217 (The Stephen King Suite): The most legendary room on the property. Long before Stephen King stayed here, a 1911 gas leak explosion occurred here, but the housekeeper survived. Today, guests report items moving on their own, lights flickering, and an unseen presence getting into bed.
- The 4th Floor: Known as the most actively haunted area. Guests often hear invisible children running, laughing, and playing in the hallways.
- Room 428: Famous for the apparition of a cowboy, believed by some to be local legend "Rocky Mountain Jim". Guests have reported furniture rearranging itself and heavy footsteps echoing from the ceiling (despite there being no floor above it).
- Room 407: Guests have reported being tucked into bed by an invisible force, or feeling someone sit on the end of their mattress.
- The Grand Staircase: Often called "The Vortex" or a spiritual portal. Visitors and paranormal investigators claim to capture orbs on camera here, and the hotel's founder, F.O. Stanley, and his wife, Flora, are said to occasionally watch over the lobby from the stairs.

THE MYRTLES PLANTATION (ST. FRANCISVILLE, LOUISIANA)

The Legend of Chloe
The most infamous ghost story at The Myrtles involves an enslaved woman named Chloe. According to the tale, Chloe was forced into being a mistress by the plantation's second owner, Judge Clark Woodruff. Caught eavesdropping on the family's private business, she was reportedly punished by having one of her ears cut off.

Seeking revenge—or perhaps a desperate way to nurse the family back to health and earn their favor—she allegedly baked a birthday cake laced with poisonous crushed oleander leaves. The plan backfired, resulting in the fatal poisoning of Judge Woodruff's wife, Sarah, and two of their children. Fearing retaliation, the other enslaved workers reportedly hanged Chloe and threw her body into the Mississippi River. Today, visitors and owners claim to see the apparition of a young woman wearing a green turban roaming the property.

The Haunted Mirror
Inside the plantation's foyer hangs a large antique mirror that is allegedly responsible for trapping the spirits of Sarah Woodruff and her two poisoned children. According to custom, mirrors are supposed to be covered after a death, but this specific mirror was reportedly overlooked. Staff and guests often report seeing mysterious handprints on the glass that cannot be washed away, as well as ghostly figures peering out from its surface.

William Winter and the 17th Step
In 1871, William Winter, who was married to the Stirling family (the plantation's owners at the time), was shot on the front porch by an unknown assailant. According to the folklore, Winter staggered into the house and attempted to crawl up the stairs to his wife. He tragically died on the 17th step. Today, guests, innkeepers, and paranormal investigators report hearing heavy footsteps and the sound of someone crawling up the stairs, always stopping abruptly on that exact same step.

THORNBURY CASTLE

Thornbury Castle is 16th-century Tudor manor in Gloucestershire, England once owned by King Henry VIII—has a reputation for being haunted.

The castle is widely reported to host two prominent ghosts:

- Jasper Tudor: The former Duke of Bedford and uncle to King Henry VII is believed to be the castle's most active ghost. Legend says his spirit dislikes women occupying his former bedchamber (now used as office space) and he will occasionally knock over books or throw objects from desks to show his frustration.

- Princess Mary Tudor: The daughter of Henry VIII and later Queen Mary I spent a portion of her childhood at Thornbury Castle. Her spirit is said to wander the grounds accompanied by her beloved greyhounds.

Today, the property operates as a luxury hotel, allowing guests to explore its rich history and alleged paranormal activity.

LOST VIDEO FOOTAGE AND LOST PHOTOS
ATTENTION: I took 7 videos at this investigation and took many pictures. The memory chip on my camera is not functioning properly and all videos and pictures were lost in cyberspace.

EVPS CAPTURED:
We obtained two EVPs - one of a woman talking and one with a man talking. The woman voice EVP was captured at the side of the house, where Deanna felt unnatural energy. The male voice EVP was captured in the backyard. Both EVPs are unintelligible and will not be placed in this article.

September 19, 2015 Saturday. Time: 1600 Hours. In 2011, Sara Baker moved to Modesto. Sara experienced paranormal activity in her condo. She started feeling cold spots, lights went off and on - on their own. Sara called a ghost hunting group - Central Valley Paranormal in Modesto. This group investigated her condo. Sarah felt like she was possessed and found herself calling the Medium a "bi---". All kinds of strange happenings occurred at this condo. A man with black clothes and a black top hat would sit on the foot of her son's bed.

When Sara was 5 years old she witnessed the Salida Massacre on Elm Street. This happened in 1989. Over 5 people died. The motivation for the murders was narcotics. Deanna felt some strange energy in the bathroom and as she looked out of the bathroom window, she felt an entity looking up towards the bathroom window and was attracted to the window across away - from the other house. Come to find out Sara had a foreign exchange student that would look out the bathroom window constantly and one time the student mysteriously opened up the window for no apparent reason in the middle of the night. Sometimes in the bathroom, the water would turn on by itself. Sara felt an attraction to the bathroom window and felt an entity looking up at her. There would be mysterious hand prints on the bathroom mirror and no one in the house had hands that matched the prints on the mirror.

Sara tells us the window that Deanna is attracted to from the other house is a haunted house according to the occupant that lives there. The neighbors that live in that house, hear people walking around their house and no one is there. They constantly hear the shuffling of feet.

Sara tells me that the entity in her home affects the way her children behave. We later learned that there is two entities in this home via the EVPs, a female entity and a male entity. Sara tells Deanna and myself, besides hearing footsteps, having the water turn off and on, the light bulbs will go out in 3s. So not just one light bulb will go out, but 3 light bulbs will go out at once. Sara has been touched, hit from behind, she hears voices. Sometimes she can hear an old man talking and the EVP we captured tonight sounded like an old man. She once heard the old man say: "are you okay?" Once Sara saw a little man in the garage and the little man went in the house and darted all over the place.

Sara and her husband once saw the cabinets open by themselves.

Sara once had a dream, that she was being chased by a demon and 4 finger marks were left on her leg.

THE SNARLING REPTILE HUMANOID:
Sara dreamed she saw a scaly reptilian type of creature that had light flashing blue eyes, it walked on its hind legs. It had some human features. The creature was gray in color and had sharp teeth.

Sometimes Sara will feel a fire sensation on one half of her body. Sara will get shooting pains and as soon as she walks away from the house, she feels okay.

Special Note: Deanna when arriving to the house, felt nauseated and sick. She even suggested for me to drive her back home. When Deanna got started with her investigation, she felt better.

Sara gets vivid dreams in this home. She dreamed that there is an entity named Michael. Michael dies in her arms. She realizes that Michael has been shot. She learns in 1975 a guy named Michael really did get shot in her neighborhood.

Sara also had dreams of bees and hornets attacking her. Also spiders that start attacking her. She hears an entity that tells her to kill her husband, this all occurred in the other home she lived at. When she told us this story, she broke down crying.

After our investigation, we gave Sara a full submersion baptism, just in case if anything is attached to her. Deanna conducted a Palo Santo wood cleansing and I conducted a Roman Catholic house blessing.
After Sara was baptized, she felt heat all over her body, she felt light headed.

Thank you Sara for the coffee, bottled water and the candy - Reeses Peanut Butter Cups, M&Ms.

Special Note: While writing this article, Princess Hannah my Pekingese wanted attention. I wasn't giving her the attention that she needed and she simply went over and turned off the Internet by stepping on the button.

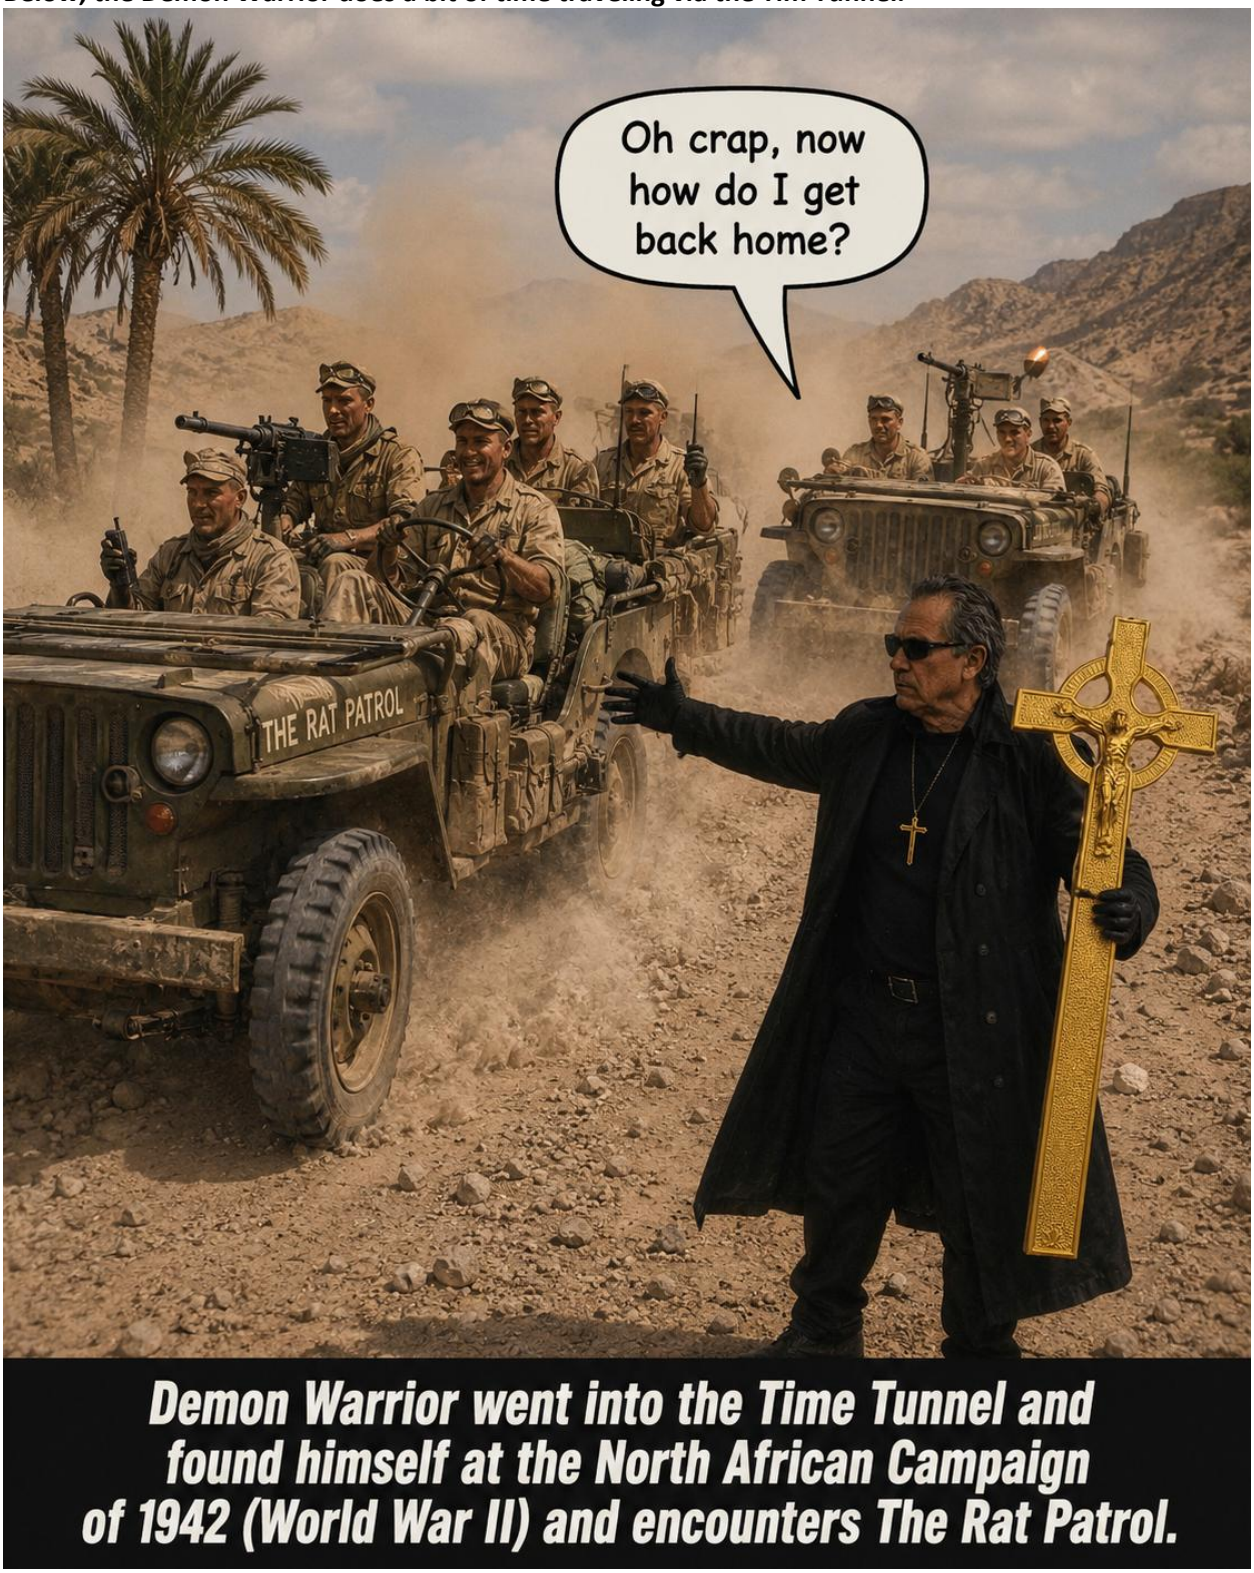
HPI: Uinta Basin
by Paul Dale Roberts
SKRRRRRReeeee
Year 1992. HPI Paranormal Investigators at Uinta Basin (near Skinwalker Ranch) and they witness dark clouds opening and ball lightning shooting out from the sky. Strange scream is heard.

Below, the Demon Warrior does a bit of time traveling via the Tim Tunnel.



Oh crap, now how do I get back home?
THE RAT PATROL
Demon Warrior went into the Time Tunnel and found himself at the North African Campaign of 1942 (World War II) and encounters The Rat Patrol.

Special Note: The Rat Patrol show reminded me of the jeeps they had in the Army. When I was stationed at Merrill Barracks in Nurnberg, Germany, I was recruited to be the Sergeant Major's Driver. I think I lasted about one week on the job, I was not very good on driving jeeps with stick shifts. On the last outing, I did an avoidance swerve almost crashing the jeep. I could have sworn I was about to hit a German woman in 1700 period clothing. Yes, Merrill Barracks is very haunted, and I believe I saw a ghost from Merrill Barracks. I told the Sergeant Major what I saw and he could only laugh. Merrill Barracks was at one time a Nazi headquarters during World War II. Merrill Barracks has a lot of history. When I was stationed at Merrill Barracks, I would sometime visit Hummelsteiner Park and Volkspark Dutzendteich. Both places were extremely haunted. Many soldiers had sightings of ghosts at these locations, or felt like they were being watched.
